WANDERINGS OF A DERELICT.
Remarkable Drifting of a Schooner That Was Abandoned a Year Ago.
The wanderings on the north Atlantic ocean of the Philadelphia schooner Wager G. Sargent, which was abandoned March 21, 1891, 300 miles east of Cape Hatteras, as marked out on the pilot chart issued by the hydrographic office, has attracted considerable attention in shipping circles.
Duffied, as the Sargent has been for twelve months, by the fierce storms that have swept the Atlantic of late, the fact that she has withstood them all and still drifts around at the will of the elements is considered remarkably by seafaring men.

When Captain Danse and his crew abandoned the Wager G. Sargent on the night of March 21 they did not think she would float until the next morning.
Her hatches had been washed off, the water was pouring into her hold, the main and foremasts were gone and hanging alongside of the wreck and the vessel was waterlogged. The crew was landed at Nuevitas and nothing was heard from the vessel until May 4, when a passing sloop sighted her some 500 miles to the eastward of the position where she was abandoned. She was then in the same condition as when the crew left her, the seas sweeping over her deeply submerged hull.

The next report of the derelict was given here in July, when a vessel that arrived from Europe reported passing her on July 2 in latitude of 40 degs, and longitude about 57 degs., which would place her just 1,300 miles east of Philadelphia. She was then drifting an easterly course, which would have brought her upon the coast of Portugal.
Aug. 8 she was again sighted, and by this time she had drifted in a southeasterly direction to the latitude of about 38 degs., longitude 40 degs. According to reports received from time to time by vessels who passed the derelict on their way across the Atlantic it was learned that she pursued a zigzag course, until Sept. 14, when she struck off in the direction of the Canary Islands. She held this course until Oct. 20, when she went off again in a southeasterly direction for the north coast of South America.

Nov. 23 she was headed about by the winds and currents due west, and made about 500 miles in this direction when she came around north to latitude 34 degs., longitude 40 degs., where she was sighted by the British steamship W. L.
Radcliffe. She was at that time, according to the captain of this steam-ship's statement, in a remarkable state of preservation, but lay deep in the water, with every roll of the sea going over her. Her bowsprit and part of her jib boom were standing, as was also about six feet of the mainmast.

Since this time nothing has been heard of the wandering derelict, and the hydrographers are keeping a watchful eye over all the ships' logs turned in for inspection with hopes of getting still more information regarding this interesting vessel.

There are numerous other derelicts adrift in the western ocean at this time, but none have withstood the storms as long as the Sargent, and shipping men say she must be a vessel of wonderful construction. She was laden, it is said, with a light cargo.—Philadelphia Press.

A Wealthy Kleptomaniac.
A short time ago, according to a jeweler, a wealthy woman bought a diamond brooch at his store, and tiring of it after a few months' wear, sent it back to be worked into a different shape.
One diamond was to remain over and he returned loose with the brooch. The woman's orders were carried out, and diamond and brooch, securely wrapped, given into her hands by a trustworthy employee. Hardly had the man returned from the errand, when the woman telephoned that the loose diamond was missing. The jeweler was dumfounded. The messenger declared he had given the package to the woman just as he had received it from the jeweler. His employer believed him, but he could not bring himself to suspect the woman.
He thought she might have dropped the stone while unwrapping the parcel, and suggested that explanation. But the woman was positive that no diamond was in the package when she received it.
There was only one thing to do, and that was to make up the loss. This the jeweler did, but his suspicions were now aroused and he determined to be watchful. It was not a great while before the woman came to the store with another piece of work. She had a diamond which she was going to send down to be set in a brooch. In a few days the diamond came, and judge of the jeweler's surprise when he recognized, by a peculiar flaw, the very diamond he had returned with the brooch. The jeweler's course was quickly taken. He simply kept the diamond. The woman has tacitly acknowledged her guilt, for, though this happened several years ago, she has never had the courage to claim it.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

An Historic Communion Cup.
An interesting relic connected with the ecclesiastical history of the state has been recovered within a few days in the town of Lyme. It is a pewter communion cup, bearing date of 1637. It was brought to this country two centuries ago by the Pilgrim family which settled in New London county. For nearly fifty years this curious relic has been lost sight of, the descendants of its original owners not knowing of its whereabouts. In 1849 it was in the possession of Thomas Pilgrim, who was at that time eighty-seven years of age and a pensioner of the Revolutionary war.
Thomas Pilgrim entered the service in 1776 for three years in one of the Connecticut regiments and was also one of the volunteers for the defense of New London in the war of 1812.
One of the last of this old pensioner's descendants in the male line, James Pilgrim, died in Hartford in 1888. He was a man of marked inventive genius. Two daughters survive him, one of whom, Frances Ella Pilgrim, was the originator of the idea of displaying the national flag in the school rooms and buildings throughout the state. She is a graduate in the state normal school and a teacher in Stoughton. The family will endeavor to regain possession of the ancient relic that has just been found in Lyme.—New London (Conn.) Telegraph.

A Lady's Experience.
A lady recently was heard to relate an experience, the moral of which should sound a warning. She was an excellent customer at a leading store, and whenever she entered it her attention was called to this or that by the floor walker, and seldom without good results. One day she approached this man and asked for some tribute in behalf of one of the city's worthiest charitable objects in which she was much interested. Her appeal was received coldly. The man demurred at the frequency of such requests, and finally, most reluctantly and ungraciously gave her fifty Japanese napkins. The lady went away chagrined at the changed manner of her formerly affable, not to say gallant, tradesman.
Upon reflection she concluded to take her patronage elsewhere. She has since declined to solicit contributions for any cause whatever, but she gives of her own time and means liberally. When asked to do anything in the way of charity begging she tells the above story, and the store and its representative are getting quite generally advertised, but scarcely in the way most desired by shrewd men of business.—Toronto Empire.

The Highest of All Chimneys.
Within 130 working days, barring any untoward act of providence, the highest chimney in America will form the most notable object on the Denver landscape. On Saturday the Omaha and Grant Smelting company let a contract to M. Scanlon to erect a chimney at the corner of Forty-first and Delaney streets 330 feet high. At this time the highest in America is that of the Clark thread mills in New Jersey, 335 feet.
There is one at Freiburg, Germany, 400 feet high, but it is only twelve feet in the clear, while that of the smelting company will be sixteen feet in the clear. The height of the one now in use here is 165 feet.—Denver Republican.

A Curious Custom.
In a church on one of the Danish islands it was the custom of the men on walking up to the altar and coming back again to bow at a certain spot to the women sitting on one side of the aisle. No one could tell why. Last year it so happened that a layer of plaster was removed from the wall on the women's side and a picture of the Virgin Mary was brought to light, which had evidently been the original cause of that reverential custom—a custom which was continued for a period of 400 years, long after its significance had been forgotten.—Vestlandske Tidende.

A Thief's Religious Compunctions.
The thief who returned the communion service he stole from a New York church, but kept the money he took at the same time, recalls the tale of the two fishermen, who, finding bread and meat in the portmanteau of a man they had murdered, ate the bread and threw away the meat—because it was Friday.
The advantages of a religious instinct are thus made manifest in unexpected ways.—Kansas City Star.

BREVITIES
CHATS ABOUT MEN.
Representative Hooker, of Mississippi, is said to be the best orator in the house.
Bynum, of Indiana, is the most aggressive member of the house of representatives.
Holman, of Indiana, is the oldest, and Bailey, of Texas, is the youngest of the members of the house of representatives.
Edward Lytton Bulwer Dickens, the youngest son of the great novelist, has been elected to parliament in New South Wales.
Cummings of New York, Caruth of Kentucky and Henderson of Iowa are the most popular men in the house of representatives in Washington.
General Loagstreet appears to be in the best of health. His face is rosy and ruddy, set off by his white side whiskers.
He is a strikingly handsome man.
Jay Gould has supplemented his gift of $10,000 to the Presbyterian Church Extension fund by a present of $25,000 to the University of the City of New York.
Isaac S. Dement, the president of the Chicago Stenographers' association, has a record of 300 words a minute, and is said to be the fastest shorthand writer of the day.
Chief Justice Fuller's hair and mustache are white and his appearance is striking. He is one of the annually dismissing number of men of note who wear their hair long.
General Palmer's house at Springfield is a small cottage a story and a half high, but built in three parts, as if additions had been made to the house as originally constructed.
Lord Lorne's time is coming, says a London writer, and ere long he will be better appreciated by many who do not know how able a man he really is. He has been a favorite of the queen.
Judson C. Clements, of Georgia, newly appointed interstate commerce commissioner, is a Baptist minister and clerk of the Georgia Baptist association and its Sunday school convention.
D. Russell Brown, the newly elected governor of Rhode Island, is forty-four years of age, and has been in the hardware and manufacturing business all his life. He is the founder and senior partner of the firm of Brown Bros. & Co., at Providence, dealers in mill supplies.

BEHIND THE SCENES.
Edwin Booth has donated $1,500 to the Actors' Fair fund.
Estelle Clayton is now devoting her time to play writing.
Duncan B. Harrison is writing a new play for his pugilistic play, Sullivan.
William H. Gillette is now able to do a little work. He has been an invalid for a year.
George Cayvan is said to occupy a better social position than any other New York actress.

The latest Danish dramatist to come to the front is Otto Benzon. He deals with Scandinavian types, but is understood not to be a disciple of the Ibsen school.
Of the several hundred actresses who must have essayed the role of Inogen since 1638, only twenty-two are recorded as having made a success of the part.
Of these Sarah Siddons and Helen Faucit are the best.

The eldest son of Richard Wagner, Siegfried, has been in London for a fortnight. He is twenty-one years old, a very agreeable fellow, with a good deal of his mother's business talent. He is quite a linguist, and speaks English fluently.

Miss Agnes Herndon lately, when playing a week of night stands between New York and Chicago, stopped a performance and said to a number of men who were munching peanuts, "When you gentlemen get through your lunch the play will go on."

When Wilson Barrett first became a theatrical manager in Leeds he made friends with the clergy and secured their fidelity by pledging himself to observe certain conditions. He has just received a handsome vase from the present bishop of Truro, "in remembrance of ten years' mutual work in Leeds and of a promise nobly kept."

ODDS AND ENDS.
A single gold brick was recently shipped to San Francisco from Yuma, the value of which was estimated at from $80,000 to $90,000.
There is a whirlpool in the Santa Fe river, three miles northwest of High Springs, Fla., into which 1,000 feet of line has been lowered without finding bottom.
New York is the leading Irish city in the world in point of population. Dublin contains 254,000 human souls and New York claims to have 300,000 Irish citizens.
A new series of postage stamps has been issued by the republic of San Salvador. All stamps previous to 1892 have been called in, and only the new stamps will be accepted in payment of postage hereafter.

Englishmen are increasing nearly seven times as fast as Frenchmen. At the beginning of the century France had a population of 37,000,000 and England 16,000,000. Now the numbers of each are almost the same, or about 88,000,000.

There are over 1,000 islands under the flag of Japan, and in Georgian bay, the north extension of Lake Huron, where we find very few islands on the map, there are in reality several thousand islands, most of them of course quite small.

WHISPERS ABOUT WOMEN.
Miss Haggin, the granddaughter of J.
B. Haggin, is as fond of horses as he is and can be seen frequently on a blooded horse.
The feature of the Petit salon in Paris this year is a portrait by Carls Duran of a very pretty American girl, Miss Davis, dressed in electric blue.
Mrs. Julia Ward Howe believes that it is never too late to learn. She commenced the study of Greek when she was nearly seventy years of age.
The Woman's Voice is edited, managed and printed entirely by women. It is published by A. Florence Grant, the only woman who owns and conducts a printing office in Boston.
The wife and daughter of David Tennyson, whose distinction comes through owning the famous swaback, Tenny, ride a great deal and own good looking horses. They are both small in stature and fair.

Mrs. Cunningham Graham, the Spanish wife of the socialist member of parliament, is a remarkable woman. She spends half the year in Spain following the track of St. Theresa, whose life she is engaged in writing.

Miss Fisher, of North Carolina, the lady who once wrote many novels under the name of Christian Reid, is now Mrs. Tiernan and publishes no more.
She is the daughter of the Colonel Fisher who gave his name to Fort Fisher.

Mrs. Frances Fisher Wood, who is a graduate of Vassar and a trustee of Barnard college, asserts that the statistics prove that nine-tenths of the children of college bred women survive infancy.
This record has never been reached before in any country or age.

Miss Mignon Conner, daughter of Billy Conner, who was the popular host of the St. James, New York, can ride like an Indian. She thinks no more of mounting a 2-year-old thoroughbred than some girls do of mounting a drummed out old school horse. She has hunted in England and in this country.
